MOONLIGHT

New Hybrid Beauty By Horace Read

Here's another new departure in June-blooming chrysanthemum beauty—our enormous cream-yellow, double-flowering Shasta Daisy—Moonlight! As blossoms open, entire plant leaps into a glittering sunburst of beauty stretching about 2½ ft. high, up to 2 ft. wide; nearly double in width and amount of blooms next year. Blossoms approx. 4½ breathtaking inches across, shading to lighter tones at tips of petals.

FROLIC (Propagating rights reserved)

New Flame-Pink Hybrid! Imagine 750 Blooms Like This On A Single 1st Year Plant!

Picture this delightful show-off brightening a drab spot in your garden as gay, perfect blossoms pop up by the hundreds! Each flower-head is a joy to behold; fluffy, piled high with lush layers of petals, curving like a puffball to create its exquisite pom-pom shape. A blushing mass of flame-pink beauty; so free-flowering each stem a complete bouquet in itself. (We've actually counted 750 blooms on a single 1st year plant!)

A FEW MINUTES TO PLANT — FOR 6 MONTHS OF BREATHTAKING BEAUTY YEAR AFTER YEAR!

Picture the incredible 6-month shower of beauty that now awaits you! It means that this summer and fall your garden will come alive with a spectacular array of chrysanthemums that actually bloom by the bushel basket . . . bloom into colorful masses so densely packed with flowers you'll barely see a leaf show . . . bloom into flowering hedges so afire with brilliance they'll turn your yard or garden into one of the beauty spots of your neighborhood.

And you can do it all with just 6 plants we send you (enough for a continuous living wall of flowers 12 to 15 feet long). And you can do it in just 20 minutes, whether you're an expert gardener or the greenest beginner. Because they're shipped to you ready-to-plant in "grow en-route" containers, and it only takes a few minutes to scoop out a few holes and plant them.

YOU MUST PLANT NOW FOR EARLIEST, FULLEST BLOOM!

It means that beginning this June, while your neighbors are still setting out plants and bulbs . . . your chrysanthemum collection is already starting to flood your porch, your driveway, your flower beds or circles with vivid masses of color!

And it means that in late fall, after dazzling you with a continuous display of hundreds upon hundreds of luscious blossoms, your collection will STILL BE IN BLOOM, with an even deeper fire and brilliance as frost tinges the petals, as snow starts to fly!

Think of it! Huge mounds of flowers the size of a bushel-basket erupting in your garden one after the other from summer 'til snow. Sunbursts of golden blossoms adorning your walks! Masses of gorgeous red flowers glistening in matched pairs against the lush green background of your lawns and evergreens! Knee-deep in bloom — stretching so wide you can't get your arms around them! Yours this summer — if you reserve your dream garden collection today!

Did you ever hear of chrysanthemums that start blooming in June? This living wall of chrysanthemums includes superblooming varieties that actually burst into bushel baskets of bloom beginning in June... and bloom again and again in brilliant masses of color in July, August, September... at a time when most ordinary chrysanthemums haven't even begun to open their first buds! Wouldn't you like to see a continuous succession of chrysanthemum bloom in your garden beginning this June — only a few short weeks from now? For news of the most exciting flower offer in years, read fascinating details below!

Why Wait 'Til September?

THESE CHRYSANTHEMUMS START BLOOMING IN JUNE

Gardener's Dreams Come True As Chrysanthemum Collection Blooms By The Hundreds From June 'Til Snow —

One of the world's largest, most beautiful Hybrid Chrysanthemums, Shasta Daisy, hailed as a triumph of plant breeding

We live in an age of plant wonders! We live in an age when science has perfected potatoes (potatoes that actually grow from tomato vines) — when huge rose-like flowers now bloom on crabapple trees — when experimental carnations now bloom outdoors in winter! And perhaps even less known to gardeners... June-blooming chrysanthemums!

Yes, this summer, how would you like to flood your garden with the fiery color and brilliance of an amazing new collection of hybrid chrysanthemums that simply can't wait until September to start blooming... that start to shower your landscape with bursting masses of color beginning this June... and then, like a miracle, bloom again and again by the hundreds.

Think of it! Chrysanthemums so new, so different that some varieties are now available for the first time in history! Chrysanthemums that give you a never-ending succession of living color and beauty in June, July, August, September, October, November, right up to frost! Chrysanthemums with such lavish blooming power you can set your landscape ablaze with 400 — 500 — even 750 flowers from one single plant—the entire plant flaming into a gigantic fireball the huge size of a bushel basket! And even more astounding — you'll watch a fantastic new hybrid burst into red, yellow and orange blossoms — 3 different-colored flowers all blooming at the same time — on one single bush — while each plant is completely covered with solid masses of flowers!

Your Neighbors Won't Believe Their Eyes Come June!

They'll stare in awe and wonder as your first bushel-baskets of color unfold! Not just a few blossoms that you'll find here and there... that's not what we mean by "June blooming." We mean blossoms by the bushel-basket! Gleaming masses of flowers spreading so wide you can't get your arms around them! Some with white blossoms 4 inches across that cluster into flowering snowballs up to 2½ feet wide! Some like color-splashed mounds of gold measuring a full 6 to 8 feet around, that rebloom all summer long! Just imagine picking gorgeous chrysanthemum sprays right through June, July, August, September as fresh flowers erupt almost daily. And while friend after friend exclaims: "Are they really chrysanthemums? How is it possible? What's your secret?"

How The Hybrid June-Blooming Chrysanthemum Came Into Being

For the past 1,000 years, ever since the first giant chrysanthemum appeared in Japan, plantmen the world over had attempted to lengthen its glorious, though short-lasting bloom. But as the science of plant hybridizing developed, there came the discovery that caused even some scientific minds to snicker, "You might as well try to stop the sun in the sky!"

For it was discovered that the chrysanthemum's blooming period was controlled by the sun. That as daylight grows shorter in Autumn, a mysterious inherited factor tracing back millions of years, causes the blossoms to open.

But as time went by, botanists uncovered an even more astonishing fact! While studying the structure of an unusual daisy-like flower, they made the startling discovery that this flower not only possessed the structure of a chrysanthemum... but actually was a primitive form of chrysanthemum! Yet unlike a typical mum, it didn't wait until September to open... but burst into bloom in June!

What Plant Breeders Discovered

From this one plant they took its early June bloom, from another type its huge size of bloom, and crossbred them into strangely beautiful, new hybrid flowers. Then from still another strain they now bred in hardiness... and from yet another its lavish clusters of blossoms.

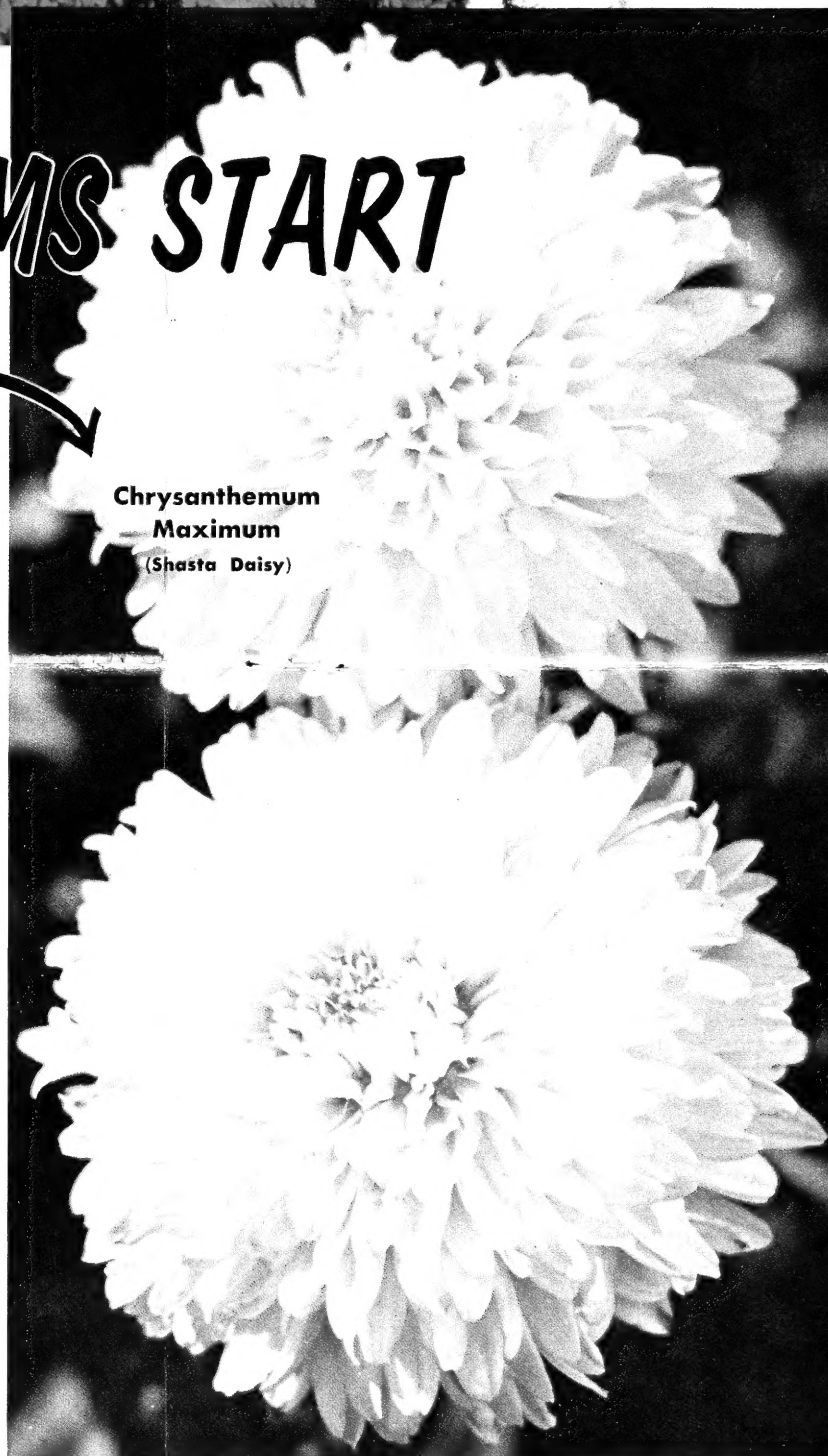

Finally, after years of work, thousands of experiments, they discovered how to penetrate the mysteries of nature and change the white blossoms to yellow, single blossoms to doubles, and then as many as 3, 4 and even 5 flowers where only one bloomed before... flowers a full 1½ times larger than these plants had ever produced before!

Through selective crossbreeding they developed new strains... toughened them... made them burst into bloom through fierce summer heat and autumnal chill... made them blossom again and again until they formed thick solid masses of flowers... and they made these masses of flowers hold their bloom even longer!

Imagine Flowers Like These In Your Garden This Summer!

On one type, the gigantic Chrysanthemum Maximum (Shasta Daisy) shown above, they developed enormous blossoms a full 4 inches across... that beginning in June erupt into huge hand-sized masses of silver-sheen blossoms set against glossy, almost iridescent leaves... and that are still merrily blazing away in September while many ordinary chrysanthemums haven't even opened their buds!

Another variety gives you a dazzling show of gold-splashed blossoms this June to September... blossoms up to 4 and even 5 full inches across... almost as large and colorful as a florist's mum worn at a football game! And borne in stunning masses of 3, 4, even 5 flowers to a single cluster.

Chrysanthemum Maximum
(Shasta Daisy)

Actual Size of Bloom Plant Patent #465

You are now looking at one of the greatest triumphs in plant-breeding history—a HYBRID JUNE-BLOOMING CHRYSANTHEMUM! Shown above, the Horace Read Shasta Daisy (Chrysanthemum Maximum) produces a massive show of glacier-white 4" blossoms in June, July, August and September!

Named for its creator, the internationally-famous hybridizer Horace Read of England, these exquisite, pure white blossoms would be the prize showpiece in any connoisseur's Fall chrysanthemum garden. But blooming as they do all summer long beginning this June... their performance in your garden is simply astounding! Produced on long graceful stems, the perfectly-formed flowers are ideal for cutting, and like all chrysanthemums, keep their gay, colorful freshness up to 2 weeks in your home without fading!

Colorful Red, Pink and Gold Varieties Extend Continuous Show of Bloom of Your June-to-Frost Collection

Now, after years of research comes a brilliant new triumph of plant breeding called Frolic... a sparkling new pom-pom that puts on such a showy display of flame-pink blossoms (about 600 to 700 blossoms the 1st season alone) its ravishing beauty can be seen a full block away!

And to complete your continuous succession of bloom and color, now comes our most colorful triumph of all... our new 1958 wonder-blooming 3-color chrysanthemum, Mardi-Gras! Turn this page to the picture of Mardi-Gras. Your own eyes will tell you that only in dreams before could you imagine chrysanthemums that flame open from red-red buds into glorious orange-hued blossoms... and then magically change color again to dazzling yellow when blossoms are fully open! One single plant that blooms in virtually any soil... that can easily give you up to 300, even 400 flowers about 3 inches across this growing season... a sheer flamburst of color-splashed blossoms stretching about 2 feet high and 2 feet across this year... double that flowering area next year... with countless more thousands of blooms for you, year after year!

THIS IS "EARLY CRIMSON"

Picture 500 flowers blazing in the sun like a beautiful ball of fire! Gorgeous arrays of bloom borne right up to snow make EARLY CRIMSON the flaming showpiece of your June-to-frost collection!
